the Courage to Change

The year 2015 was transformative for The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation (TGKVF). After several years of strategic planning, the Foundation piloted full implementation of its new community wealth-building approach. This approach will continue to guide the Foundation's investments by focusing its discretionary funds on building the seven forms of community wealth that address specific root cause issues. Also in 2015, the Foundation put this new theory of change to work on Charleston's West Side through its "Investing in Our Communities- West Side of Charleston" initiative. This place-based strategy utilizes all of the devices in TGKVF's toolbox: grants and investments, leveraging assets, leadership and advocacy, convening stakeholders, and building community capacity.

TGKVF's community wealth-building strategy takes a systems approach to community change by understanding the existing forms of capital already present within a community, respecting and building on existing efforts, and engaging other partners to help grow local wealth. This work requires an investment in strong collaborative efforts and thus the Foundation no longer supports single organizations working alone, but instead advances the projects and programs that build connectivity amongst various stakeholders across multiple sectors. Through our root-cause analysis, TGKVF realized that the urgency of our region's challenges required combined efforts, shared resources, and unified priorities. To achieve real and lasting impact, we must all work together to change complex and dynamic systems; no single organization can succeed in this work on its own. In addition to this emphasis on collaboration, TGKVF's community wealth-building approach requires more strategic participation in the proposal development process.

In 2015, the Foundation's program officers coached 24 collaborative efforts and recommended 15 grants for funding. Those grants include: Appalachian Reading Center's reading services coalition with Mission WV and Clay County Schools; CADCO Foundation's Leadership Kanawha

Valley program; CAMC Health Education & Research Institute's nutrition-based KEYS for Healthy Kids Coalition; Children's Therapy Clinic's behavioral therapy partnership with Bright Futures, Inc.; Coalfield Development Corporation's Refresh Appalachia local foods collaboration with Unlimited Future, Inc. and Lincoln County Schools; College Summit's post-secondary guidance Future Corps program; DuBois on Main Museum's Youth Media and Leadership Academy; East End Family Resource Center's work with Education Alliance and Kanawha County Schools in the AmeriCorps on the Frontline Dropout Prevention program; Lincoln County Schools' Afterschool Program at Duvall PK-8 and West Hamlin Elementary; Human Resource Development Foundation's healthy lifestyles collaboration with Bob Burdette Center, Girl Scouts of Black Diamond, and PRO-Kids, Inc.; Mission West Virginia's academic and life skills support partnership with TEAM for WV Children; Southern Appalachian Labor School's Accent Education program for at-risk youth in Fayette County; WV Health Right's oral health collaboration with Women's Health Center; WV Healthy Kids and Families Coalition's civic engagement initiative; and WVU Foundation's Extension Services' six-county STEM Ambassador program.

In addition to supporting a multitude of projects across our region, TGKVF dedicated particular focus to a nine-block area of Charleston's West Side. To gain a better understanding of the assets and opportunities within the neighborhood, and to provide residents with a platform to directly express their vision, TGKVF commissioned the Kanawha Institute for Social Research & Action, Inc. (KISRA) to conduct a needs assessment study of the target area. The assessment was conducted between July and December 2015 and included a review of secondary data, a door-to-door survey of 241 residents, and multiple focus group discussions.

As a part of the "Investing in Our Communities – West Side of Charleston" initiative, TGKVF supported two intersecting projects in 2015:

1) Project West Invest which incentivizes neighborhood home ownership/renovation for law enforcement

2) Second Avenue Community Center Restoration which targets renovation of a historic center in the heart of the neighborhood

“TGKVF realized that the urgency of our region’s challenges required combined efforts, shared resources, and unified priorities. To achieve real and lasting impact, we must all work together to change complex and dynamic systems; no single organization can succeed in this work on its own.”

The support of these projects demonstrates the Foundation’s commitment to cross-sector collaboration as each utilized resources from a variety of partners including government entities, nonprofits, businesses, residents, and other funders.

While we have come a long way, our work is far from complete. The Foundation will continue to refine our approach to suit the needs of the communities we serve. As we move forward, TGKVF will strategically measure the impact of our investments by working with grantees to ensure that their programs are effectively planned and implemented in ways that build community wealth as well as collect and evaluate the data necessary to achieve evidence-based results. We look forward to 2016 as we continue to invest in projects that are working to transform our region.

Education

TGKVF's long-term education goal is for our community to be a place where students, from early childhood to post-secondary, build the skills, knowledge, and credentials to become productive and successful.

Over the next few years, we believe the Foundation can help make the biggest strides toward this long-term goal by investing our funds, leadership, and influence toward accomplishing the following medium-term objectives. To this end, TGKVF will work to:

1. Increase access to proven out-of-school time tutoring, mentoring, and/or learning programs that emphasize Science, Technology, Reading, Engineering, Arts, and Math (STREAM) education
2. Deepen the impact and scale of programs at home, school, and/or community centers that connect families to their children's development
3. Expand the efforts of proven post-secondary guidance, career advisory, and/or vocational programs that train students for jobs in promising economic sectors

To accomplish these objectives, TGKVF seeks to invest in collaborative efforts that help grow the following forms of wealth and meet the associated indicators of success.

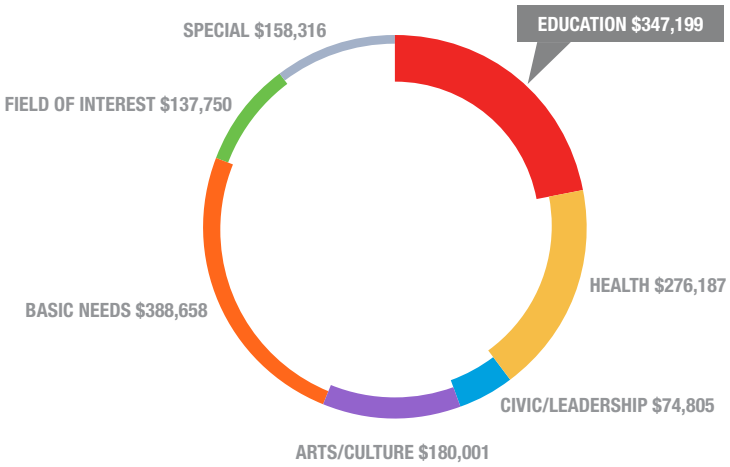
Individual Wealth: Skills, Health, Confidence & Income

TGKVF will measure the growth in individual wealth using the following indicators of success:

A. Improved STREAM skills and knowledge among youth

B. Increase in summer learning among youth

C. Increased access to educational resources for families living in marginalized communities



D. More youth from marginalized communities attending and graduating from vocational programs and college

E. Parents with more skills and capacities to participate in their child's educational development

F. More children prepared for kindergarten and demonstrating school readiness

Intellectual Wealth: Community-Wide Access to Knowledge, Innovation, & Technology

TGKVF will measure the growth in intellectual wealth using the following indicators of success:

G. More qualified tutors, mentors, and teachers working in out-of-school time programs

H. Increase in the capacity and reach of proven programs that assist families to become vital partners in children's education and life success

I. Increase in the capacity and reach of proven vocational programs that train students for promising sector jobs

J. Increase in the capacity and reach of programs that target early childhood education

Social Wealth: Trust, Relationships, & Mutual Support

TGKVF will measure the growth in social wealth using the following indicators of success:

K. More youth attending out-of-school time programs

L. A rise in family participation and volunteerism in educational and/or recreational youth programs

M. Higher rates of family involvement in the development, governance, management, and/or evaluation of youth programs and/or organizations that serve youth

Financial Wealth: Community Investments & Household Savings

TGKVF will measure the growth in financial wealth using the following indicators of success:

N. Increase in the number of vocational and college graduates who are employed in promising sectors and earning enough income to invest in family assets

Mission West Virginia, Team for WV Children, & The Appalachian Reading Center serve foster youth

Over the past nine months, collaborations among Mission West Virginia, TEAM for WV Children and The Appalachian Reading Center have worked to support foster youth in the Kanawha Valley. While these partnerships all vary in the character of their operations, they each work to ensure that youth within the foster care system achieve their fullest potential.

Their programs, designed to mentor students in the foster care system, work directly with schools, families, and group home facilities. Mission West Virginia's "The Bridge" works to provide K-12 foster youth with academic support and post-secondary planning. TEAM for WV Children's "Fostering Futures," developed by the National Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) Association, serves high school students in areas such as independent living planning and career exploration.

West Virginia has more than 4,000 children in foster care and more than 1 in 5 of those youth will become homeless as they "age out" of the system when they turn 18 years old. Only 58 percent of children within foster care will graduate high school, fewer than 3 percent earn a college degree, and by age 24, only half are employed. To address these issues, Mission WV's "The Bridge" and TEAM for WV Children's "Fostering Futures" received funding support from The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation in October of 2015.

The Bridge and Fostering Futures each serve their own students and work is individualized to meet participants' needs. This customized approach allows their collaboration to flourish through resource-sharing and co-presenting. Enrichment opportunities that benefit both sets of students are also combined, such as college campus visits and group workshops. To date, the programs collectively serve more than 40 students with intensive academic and life skills support.

In December 2015, the Appalachian Reading Center built upon this collaboration by partnering with Mission WV to provide reading support services to foster youth in Clay County, WV. The targeted students have experienced a loss in learning due to frequent placement and school changes or they have learning needs that require extra attention. In rural locations, these needs may go unmet because of the isolation and lack of resources the community experiences. The Appalachian Reading Center tutoring initiative is aimed at training 6–7 tutors in the Clay County area to deliver reading instruction to at least 14 high-need, reading deficient students that are in foster or kinship care. The Appalachian Reading Center trains and supervises these tutors and The Bridge of Mission WV refers the students, supports the families, and also supervises the tutors.

These partnerships have been a source of hope for students like Eric who are within foster care in the Greater Kanawha Valley region. Funding from The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation supports staffing, travel, scholarships, tutor stipends, and materials.

Amanda Davis, Program Director of The Bridge, shares the story of Eric:

"A year ago, Eric was living out of state, homeless, and truant with no guidance or assistance from any caring adult. Because he lacked a permanent address, Eric was unenrolled from his school and lacking a full year of credits. He was not expected to graduate from high school, much less go to college.

Now, thanks to a supportive school atmosphere and The Bridge's services, Eric is not only on track to graduate, he is making high grades in all classes, including a couple of college-level courses. Eric always knew that he was smart and driven, but now he has the confidence to challenge himself even more. He hopes to go to West Virginia University (WVU) and pursue an engineering degree.

The Bridge was able to advocate for Eric and tell his incredible story to admissions counselors and scholarship committees. With this support, his college dreams are coming true: he has been accepted to WVU and has earned scholarship funding that will allow him to pursue his ambitions."

TGKVF's long-term health goal is to be a community that supports the healthy choice.

1. Increase the capacity of communities, organizations, and social entrepreneurs to develop healthy recreational opportunities and/or expand access to locally grown, healthy foods.
2. Expand the amount of public greenspace, access to streams, and/or bikeable/walkable paths within our community.
3. Improve access to preventative, behavioral, and/or oral healthcare in marginalized communities.

Refresh Appalachia

Providing Agricultural Entrepreneurship Development

Refresh Appalachia is a regional economic and workforce development initiative to establish a sustainable training and development program to increase the success of beginning farmers and ranchers in southern West Virginia and Central Appalachia. A social enterprise of the Coalfield Development Corporation (Coalfield), Refresh Appalachia applies the organization's successful 33-6-3 framework in Lincoln County to grow an intensive agriculture industry and skilled workforce poised to create and retain community wealth through local and regional food system jobs and markets. The 33-6-3 model promotes workforce development: a Refresh Appalachia participant spends 33 hours working for an income; six hours a week are devoted to core community college and business classes for an associate's degree in entrepreneurship; and three hours per week are committed to life skills coaching (parenting, financial management, and goal-setting).

This initiative strives to supply and strengthen the local food system, increase access to healthy food, and aggregate and distribute produce to meet regional and national markets. Refresh Appalachia enhances the knowledge and skills of beginning farmers and ranchers by creating a network of training sites called Learning Farms Incubators, which then generate revenue and serve as hands-on training sites for beginning farmers, ranchers, and high school students.

"Refresh Appalachia- Lincoln County" is a collaborative partnership between Coalfield Development Corporation, Lincoln County High School, Unlimited Future, Inc., Step By Step, Inc. and the Lincoln County Economic Development Authority.

The project team consists of project implementers, community partners, and technical assistance providers; each member of the collaboration has its own role. Coalfield Development Corporation provides on-the-job training and mentorship; Lincoln County High School hosts the Learning Farm Incubator as well as recruits and educates students; Unlimited Future, Inc. provides training and marketing support; Step by Step, Inc. recruits and mentors program participants and identifies communities in need of fresh produce; and the Lincoln County Economic Development Authority identifies additional sites, supports sales, and conducts community outreach.

Notably, the project partnership between Coalfield and Lincoln County High School was originally conceived by a Coalfield construction crew member and recent graduate of Lincoln County High. Recognizing the vast yet underutilized agriculture resources available at the school, Coalfield crew member, Colt Brogan, suggested that Coalfield contact the school about a potential partnership.

Activities to Date

Site development

- Construction of two 48'x18' high tunnels. Refresh Appalachia partnered with Hudson Farms to build low-budget high tunnels on the school property. These are affordable growing spaces that can be easily adopted by regional farmers who are not able to afford high cost tunnels.

Facility upgrades

- Refresh Appalachia and high school staff upgraded both heated greenhouses to prepare them for year-round growing.

Production

- Refresh Appalachia staff and high school students have worked together to plan production for the year.
- Two greenhouses are nearly full of starts that are being purchased by area producers, or will be used on the farms.
- Refresh Appalachia has incubated 150 egg producing chickens that will be moved to pasture in April.

According to Ben Gilmer, President of Refresh Appalachia, “From our initial discussions it was clear that real synergies existed between our programs. First, the high school agriculture program is traditionally limited by the school calendar year so students rarely have an opportunity to engage in agriculture activities that follow traditional seasons. With Coalfield’s year-round crew, students are now able to be involved in activities that follow traditional production cycles. Secondly, high school vocational programs have recently shifted to “simulated workplaces” where their classroom structure mirrors that of a business environment. The high school students are now able to work alongside Coalfield’s staff in an actual enterprise.”

Refresh Appalachia crew member, Colt Brogan, says, “It’s amazing that now I am able to work in the same school where I graduated. All through school I wished that I could help this facility reach its full potential – and now here I am.”

Funding from The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation supports staffing, training, and building materials.

Sales and marketing

- Refresh Appalachia has planted several products that will be used by the Lincoln County high school.
- Commissioner of Agriculture, Walt Helmick, visited the program and expressed interest in transferring the model to schools throughout the region.
- The initiative is currently selling its seedlings to area farmers and produce to retail outlets such as The Wild Ramp.

Community engagement

- Refresh Appalachia hosted its first workshop which was an all-day high tunnel construction workshop. Over 80 students were in attendance and at least 15 members of the community.
- The team attended a meeting at the Lincoln County FFA alumni meeting and the local Farm Bureau meeting to introduce the project and solicit feedback from area producers.

TGKVF's long-term civic engagement & community building goal is to be a community full of strong, innovative, and effective individuals and groups who work to create shared visions, cross-cultural relationships, and the capacity to foster positive change.

Over the next few years, we believe the Foundation can help make the biggest strides toward this long-term goal by investing our funds and leadership toward accomplishing the following objectives. To this end, TGKVF will work to:

2. Expande access to early childhood and youth programs that prepare children, especially those from marginalized communities, for a lifetime of civic engagement

DuBois Leadership & Media Academy

Offering Leadership and Arts Enrichment to Fayette County Students

During the summer of 2015, eleven middle school students in Fayette County attended the DuBois Leadership and Media Academy. Over the course of six weeks, they made short films, developed leadership skills, and learned about local black history.

The Academy was housed at the DuBois on Main museum in Mount Hope, which honors the heritage of the all-black DuBois High School. The school was open from 1907 to 1956. In spite of the inequality they faced, many DuBois students made outstanding local, state, and national achievements in the fields of science, the arts, medicine, religion, education, the military, public service, and business.

Academy students filmed oral histories with DuBois High School graduates and selected footage from the interviews to create short films. The topics of the films included segregated schools in Fayette County; cooking and growing food; and the importance of radio to older generations. Several local media professionals dropped in for workshops and discussions. Underpinning the program was the history of the all-black DuBois High School and educational segregation in Mount Hope. During one session, students discussed race and racism with an organizer from Race Matters West Virginia, a statewide network dedicated to reducing racial inequality.

A leadership instructor worked with the students throughout the summer to think about ways that they can lead in their own social circles and community. Students used games, puzzles, and role-playing to talk about how leadership shows up in their own lives. At a Community Leadership Roundtable discussion, students met and talked with community leaders such as a House of Delegates member, the executive director of a nonprofit, a small business owner, a mayor, and others.

At the end of the summer, students showcased their short films at a Premiere Party where they received individualized awards and small cash prizes for what they had contributed to the Academy. The videos and photos that the students created then became part of DuBois on Main Museum's exhibits and were later donated to the West Virginia State Archives.

Grants from The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation and the National Coal Heritage Area Authority allowed for the purchase of media equipment, healthy snacks, student awards, staffing, and more. Other Students say…

"My favorite part was just being able to come and feel as if we were all one family."

"I like that I got to learn new things and more about media."

"I liked learning all about media and meeting people that work at the newspaper and stuff."

Parents said…

"I never heard anything negative-except 'It's over already?' "

"I think this is a great program for children to attend and I also think they should continue this program every year. It makes a difference in children's lives in many different ways."

partners included the West Virginia Community Development Hub, Appalshop, WVU Extension Services, and Beauty Mountain Studio.

Catherine Moore, co-founder of the DuBois Youth Leadership and Media Academy, shares the experience of one participant, Mary:

"Mary is a very quiet, shy and unassuming young person. She applied for the Academy all on her own, without encouragement from her teachers, and her application was one of the most thoughtful and heartfelt that we received. Mary had recently been placed to live with her grandparents so she was experiencing some painful adjustments at home. Over the course of the summer, Mary demonstrated her willingness to lead and teach others.

Her maturity and her keen observations stood out. She wasn't the loudest, boldest, or flashiest leader, but at the end of the Academy, her peers democratically elected her the Leader of the Year. She was shocked by the decision when she accepted her award. Mary's grandmother said she had been talking for weeks about how much she wanted the leadership award (and the accompanying gift of a video camera) but how doubtful she was that she would win. Winning the award grew Mary's confidence and taught all the participants about what leadership can look like."

ARTS & CULTURE

Arts and cultural activities are integral to a community's success. The Foundation supports projects that increase opportunities for marginalized communities to participate in diverse and artistic experiences, and particularly those programs that foster creativity, self-expression, and cross-cultural exchange. From youth ballets to music academies, theater productions to festivals, TGKVF is committed to supporting the arts.

BASIC NEEDS

The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation believes that without caring for its residents' basic needs, a community is incapable of thriving. For this reason, TGKVF is committed to helping those who are most vulnerable including seniors and low-income families. The Foundation supports organizations that take a long-term view and work to move people and places out of poverty. Basic needs, as we define them, include shelter, food, and clothing.

Scholarships

In December 2015, The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation was host to 80 college freshman and their families from across the state for a scholarship reception at the Governor's Mansion in Charleston. The reception featured acceptance speeches from two scholarship recipients and a keynote address from First Lady Joanne Tomblin. To TGKVF's scholarship awardees, the First Lady declared: "Congratulations! Your commitment to succeeding in the classroom, combined with your hard work, have brought you this far and will lead you even further. You are smart and energetic… you were and still are at the top of your class…And you are West Virginia's future!"

The Scholarship Reception honors the recipients' academic achievements and recognizes the vitally important gift of education. TGKVF offers various scholarships to help students pursue a post-secondary education and achieve their ambitions.
Some scholarships are designated for graduating seniors of particular schools while others are awarded for specific fields such as nursing or law.

Numerous TGKVF scholarships are based on financial need and not academic achievement.

TGKVF administers over 500 funds and more than 100 of those are designated for statewide scholarships. In the 2015-16 academic school year, TGKVF funded 427 scholarships for a total of $699,675.

Professional Advisors

Professional Advisors are some of our best friends, and for good reason …

They know smart ways to give charitably! At least half our donors come to The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation after consulting with a professional advisor. That makes us proud! It means the Foundation passes the "due diligence" test of a very discriminating profession.

It is our view that clients are best served when a full complement of expert advisors are working on their behalf. In addition to an Attorney, the Estate Planning Team may be comprised of many members including the Accountant; the Trust Officer, the Insurance Advisor/Financial Planner; the Investment Broker/ Advisor and The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation.

Each professional advisor brings a different expertise and skill set to the important process of estate planning. Each advisor also has an opportunity, and an obligation, to help guide clients in devising strategies that are fiscally meaningful and sustainable.

Professional Advisors possess the right tools for preserving wealth among families and ensuring its availability across generations.

We at the Foundation frequently share our knowledge with professional advisors. We have a proven record as experts in grant making and gift planning, and have become a valuable resource for professional advisors and donors. Working in tandem with Professional Advisors, we ensure a value-based dimension to financial and estate plans. We constantly strive to exceed our clients' expectations and goals. This will ultimately contribute to greater client satisfaction, and a stronger community enhanced through charitable giving.

Professional Advisors Handbook available upon request by contacting TGKVF.

Why Donors Give

From the time of its creation in 1962, many contributions have been made to The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation. Small and large, memorial gifts, honorary gifts, undesignated and with specific charitable purposes, donors have expressed their wish to help one another, help the community, bring relief to a cause, and to be part of a caring connected community.

Benefits of Giving to The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation

Flexibility

A number of options are available to help you, as a donor, realize your philanthropic goals – and the future philanthropic goals of your family. Whether you would like to focus your contributions on a specific charity, or would rather help several different causes, The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation has a fund to meet your personal needs. In establishing a fund you will have the right to name the Fund, determine the property to be given, and select the type of Fund that best suits your purpose(s). Funds may be established for smaller amounts if there is a true commitment to bringing the balance up to the required minimum for that fund type. You may also give anonymously and let the Foundation act on your behalf.

Simplicity

Our donors also enjoy a number of benefits from making a gift to a community foundation. For instance, a gift to the Foundation will simplify your charitable giving. One contribution may address a number of different needs and benefit many charitable organizations in the community/region. You are relieved of the problem of identifying those agencies which address your specific purposes because the Foundation has already done so.

Maximum Tax Benefits

Another consideration is the tax benefits. The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation is a public foundation under federal tax law and your contribution qualifies for maximum deductibility for income, gift, and estate tax purposes.

Professional Fund Management

Additionally, each Fund's assets are managed by investment professionals using established guidelines set by the Foundation's Board of Trustees. All receipts and expenditures are independently audited and fully disclosed to the public annually.

Economical

Administrative expenses are covered by a modest charge against the income of each Fund and by donations made to help meet such expenses. Traditionally, the trustee banks and investment managers have generously reduced their fees for managing Foundation assets. As a result, more of your charitable gift reaches the community or organization you wish to benefit.

Permanence

The fact that your gift to the community is administered by the Foundation and becomes part of a perpetual trust is a very important benefit to consider. Your gift will never lapse, unless you designate otherwise. Income will continue growing through the years to satisfy your philanthropic purposes. At the same time, the Foundation has the ability to address the changing charitable needs of the community as they arise. If the original purpose of your gift becomes obsolete or impractical, the Board of Trustees is empowered to redirect your gift to other related purposes or programs, without the expense or delay of court action.

Personal Philanthropic Services

The Foundation has expertise in working with donors to design philanthropic funds and unique grant making programs tailored to donors' particular charitable values and interests.

Types of Funds

With a gift of $10,000 or more, you can create a Fund with its own name and charitable purpose(s).

Administrative

In creating an administrative fund, you help ensure maximum benefit to the community by defraying the costs of services provided by the Foundation. Your contribution will support, in perpetuity, the work of the Foundation and serve as a lasting tribute for a better community.

Unrestricted or Discretionary

This type of fund gives the Foundation the opportunity to respond to the changing needs of the community, assist in emergency relief, and support innovative responses to community problems. Your contribution will join with various funds created by a history of visionary philanthropists. The choice of this type of fund will allow you to make a lasting impact on our community. An unrestricted fund can be named for a person, or a cause, allowing others to contribute to the fund.

Field of Interest

You can show your support for organizations that focus on issues that concern you such as the arts, education, health, human services, land use, and/or recreation through the creation of a field of interest fund. The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation strives to seek out valuable projects in these areas and, as a donor, you may enjoy participating with us as we go through the process of identifying and selecting these projects.

Donor Advised

Donor advised funds are for those who wish to remain active in the giving process. As a donor, you reserve the right to make grant (giving) recommendations to specific charitable organizations that have meaning for you. The flexibility of this type of fund allows you to vary your charitable contributions from year to year, and encourages philanthropy of future generations. Investments, paperwork, and grantee monitoring are all handled by the Foundation, with recognition to the donor for the gift.

Designated

For donors who want to give specifically to one or more charitable organizations for years to come we recommend a designated fund. With this fund type, grants are made from the fund as long as the organization(s) designated remain in operation and remain consistent with the funds' original charitable purposes. Should changes in a charity's mission occur over time, the Foundation's Board of Trustees will seek out alternate beneficiaries to ensure the donor's original charitable goals continue to be served. The Foundation conducts reviews of designated fund charities to ensure that the resources are used as the donor intended.

Scholarships

Many individuals and organizations find great reward in helping deserving students accomplish their educational goals. Scholarship funds may contain field of interest, residence, financial need requirements or they can be set up with broad criteria. The fund can be named for an individual, a family or an organization and is a lasting way to memorialize a friend or loved one. Creating a scholarship fund requires a gift of $20,000 or more.

Agency Endowments

For a non-profit organization that wishes to transfer all, or part, of its endowment to a designated Fund within The Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation, agency funds can help reduce administrative challenges. Individual donors may also establish agency endowments to help support the ongoing mission of a charitable organization of their choosing. The Foundation considers the management of agency endowments a service. This partnership truly brings economies of scale, expertise, and reduced Fund management costs to other charitable organizations. It will also protect the individual agency's hard-earned endowment and ensure it is always available to support its charitable mission.

How to Create a New Fund

1. Define your charitable objectives and meet with your professional advisor.
2. Select the best asset for funding your gift.
3. Meet with the Foundation President and CEO.
4. Decide the type of fund that is best for you.
5. Name the fund.
6. Complete the "Fund Agreement."
7. Transfer gift assets to the Foundation.
8. WELCOME to the Foundation!
